BOUTIQUE BREAK

'The City of Smiles,' is the slogan that greets Bangkok's visitors, and the mantra comes into effect as soon as one steps onto Thai soil.

THE SCENE

Coming from the Middle East, I'm thoroughly spoilt when it comes to glamour and everything being top-of-the-range. With my standards set so high, the S15's initial boutique title was leaving much to be desired; but my preconceptions were proving to be misconceptions as I pulled up to the glass-encased building. Entering the lobby, the chaos of the city's streets was left at the hotel's doorstep and replaced with a calm ambiance decorated in a modern mix of leather and wood. Checked in, the seventh floor was to be my home away from home during my stay, and I knew instantly that I would feel homesick when I had to leave.

THE ROOMS

Looking at the room itself, dark oaks and soft beige fabrics provided the ideal backdrop to the bright, white linens that dressed the queen-size bed. With crisp cotton sheets and a cloud-like duvet, the spongy bed was a welcomed asset to the room; and although it took up most of the floor space, two full-length mirrors added that sense of depth that was lacking. Moving onto the marble bathroom, all the necessities were taken care of; from the toiletries to a rain shower and tub, the bathroom even strangely featured the room's only closet space, which was the ideal size for my two-day stay.

DRINK & DINE

Heading to the lobby lounge, I enjoyed a quick snack and caught a glimpse of my neighbours heading out on the town before stopping by S15's Café-Thai for an authentic Asian meal.

THE FACILITIES

Workaholics can head to S15's business centre that is fully stocked with all the office staples and services to keep you in the loop; but I suggest you take in the boutique's personalised service and homely vibe before bringing all that excess baggage along with you.

SOMETHING SPECIAL

For those with some spare time on their hands, the spa is a good escape from the city, and where better to get a Thai massage than in Thailand?

IF I HAD ONE QUIBBLE...

...the proximity of the spa to my room meant that the spa aroma infused my hotel experience. – Tania Richards /
